Senator Gershaw Writes From Ottawa

Public attention all over Canada is being directed toward conditions in such institutions as mental hospitals and penitentiaries. Knowledge of the human mind, its fears, its urges and its other troubles that infect it, has greatly expanded in the last forty years. Treatment has become scientific and cures in mental homes reach a high percentage. Unfortunately there is great overcrowding in all mental hospitals in Canada. Also the staffs are inadequate, poorly paid and poorly trained. Recent investigations have for these reasons shown that inmates live under very undesirable conditions and are at times handled with roughness and even cruelty. Broken arms and jaws and body bruises have been found.

Prisons are the over crowded and conditions here also reflect little credit on our Christian civilization. These subjects come up in parliament from time to time and several commissions have studied prison reform. Improvements have been worked out and changes have been made with the hope of preparing prisoners to become useful citizens. The young are kept away from old offenders, where possible. There are more reading and writing privileges more educational films, more broadcasts are listened to and more visitors allowed.

It is now suggested that one commissioner be given the responsibility of selecting and training all prison officers. He will also have the directing of all the education of prisoners for Canada.

Another commissioner will supervise all medical work. He will be in charge of recreation, physical training and the mental health of prisoners.

Preventing crime is always better than punishing the criminal and in parliament the discussion often goes around to the causes of crime.

Children from broken homes frequently become criminals. This is really the number one factor. When parents are divorced children are neglected, unloved and uneducated along moral lines.

Lack of school education seems to be a second cause. The great majority of prisoners in Canada never reached grade VI in school. They have read only the poorest of literature and have never had the opportunity of being influenced by the teacher of high ideals or the books of great authors.

There are 24.12 percent of the inmates mentally deficient. Many of these require treatment in a mental hospital.

Low income and lack of employment brings evil ways. In England it is found that 70 percent of these who find employment on being released never become repeaters.

The members suggest that millions should be spent on slum clearances, better homes, schools, playgrounds, etc., so that millions can be saved in prison expenditure.

F. W. GERSHAW.

Survey Cards Out

Canada is today a major food producing country whose surplus food products are marketed in all parts of the world. Much effort and sacrifice has been made by farmers, farm organizations, agriculturists and governments to maintain a high standard of quality in Canadian agricultural products, and to expand export market for our quality food products. Currently, the quantity demanded of most foodstuffs exceeds the available supply and there is no problem in selling our surplus agricultural production. This is so because the ravages of war have reduced the production of food in war-torn countries of Europe to far below their normal requirements. It would be a mistake, however, for Canadian agriculture to assume that the present favorable position from the seller's point of view will be maintained for very many years. It is vital, therefore, that we look to the future, and by maintaining good quality food, retain the favorable export market conditions of Canadian produce. The policies now being formulated and the decisions now made will determine the future of Canadian agriculture for many years. It is of vital importance, therefore, that the true facts about Canadian

COLLATERAL

An Indian needed some cash, so he went to a banker and asked about a loan.

"How much money do you need?" asked the banker.

"I want two hundred dollars."

"For how long?"

"Maybe two weeks; maybe a month."

"And what security have you to offer?"

"The lot two hundred horses."

"The loan was granted. A short time afterward, the Indian came into the bank with two thousand two hundred dollars in cash. He paid off the note and, pocketing the rest of the bankroll, started to leave."

The banker stopped him. "Why not let us take care of that money for you?"

"The old Indian's mind flew back to the day when he wanted two hundred dollars, and looking the banker straight in the eye, he asked, 'How many horses you got?'"

A Gleichen gardener has written The Call as follows: I have learned some truths from my garden. I have grown, with my flowers in tact and gentleness and in laughter. For a garden holds the essence of life and tells the story of life's loveless. We have learned that growing things, no matter where they are placed, will lean eagerly toward the light of the day. We have also learned that the dancing shadow of a leaf will change a grim wall to a thing of beauty. I have also learned that weeds may be entirely charming also that the sturdy growth of those plants that do not bear blossoms is needed to lend leaven to a riot of color. I have learned that thinning out is often necessary if one would have a garden grow in health. And I have learned also that the process of thinning out may be accomplished in all tenderness and compassion. I honestly believe it would be hard to own a garden and at the same time be an atheist. For God's presence is in every breath of fragrance and His touch is on the petals of each flower.

—The most fragile blade of grass that pushes its way through the prison of the earth is one of His miracles. His enduring mercy is in the courage of each perennial that has kept beneath the snow and has dared to waken to the call of a new springtime. Every person in the world should have a garden. Even if that garden is only a window box set on a sunny ledge, or a flat bowl of lily bulbs on a table. Every person in the world should have the splendor and peace of a garden to fill the hours with its music and its lyric verse. Some luxuries are beyond our grasp—and it is better, perhaps, that they should be. But the luxury of owning a garden is beyond the grasp of no one. When visiting a distant city I have seen a scarlet geranium growing in glory upon a tenement window sill. And I have seen the pined face of a slum child bending alone, it taken on a reflection of its radiance.

An Asset To The West

THE POSSIBILITY OF FINDING new and diversified uses for farm products has always been a great interest to agriculturists as well as to scientists and manufacturers. During the depression when there were great surpluses of wheat and other cereal grains, the discovery of new industrial uses for these products would have been welcomed and might have been of great benefit to farmers in this country. At the present time, however, there is such a serious world shortage of wheat and other cereal grains that no surplus exists. Furthermore it is now realized that if there is to be an adequate standard of nutrition throughout the world, such surpluses as accumulated during the depression years will never occur again.

Cereal Straw Might Be Used

Apart from cereal grains, however, there are numerous agricultural products which may be processed for use in industry. At the New Prairie Regional Laboratory of the National Research Council, which is now being constructed at Saskatoon, scientific investigations into industrial uses for farm products, as well as extensive research in cereal chemistry will be carried on. Dr. R. K. Larnour, the director of the new laboratory, in a recent address stated that one matter to be investigated is the possible industrial uses of cereal straw. The director pointed out that approximately 10,000,000 tons of straw is wasted in Canada each year. From this amount of straw 3,600,000 tons of cellulose could be extracted, an amount almost equal to the entire annual output of pulp in the Dominion.

Among Projects To Be Started

It was not suggested that straw could take the place of the pulpwood industry, but Dr. Larnour was of the opinion that it could be used for straw board, and for insulation purposes, provided an economical system could be devised for collecting the straw. Research into the production of vegetable oils, and fermentation processes which would produce high-priced substances will be among the many projects which will be undertaken when the laboratory opens this fall. It is now expected that 34 scientists and 50 technicians will be employed in research work there, and there will be facilities to accommodate about 30 workers in the future. This laboratory will be an asset to the Western provinces and the scientists who work there will have an opportunity to contribute to the development and prosperity of that important section of the country.

Many Canadians Would Emigrate To N.Z.

AUCKLAND, N.Z. — David Wilson, retiring New Zealand high commissioner to Canada, said on his return to Auckland that if New Zealand wanted Canadian immigrants and shipping were available, "there's no doubt large numbers would come."

Wilson said that during three years in Canada he had addressed hundreds of meetings and there were always two or three dozen enquiring about the possibility of emigrating to New Zealand.

He said he had explained he had not gone to Canada "as an emissary to promote emigration from a sister dominion."

Canada had done a wonderful job during the war with the Commonwealth Air Training Plan, he said. Great as was Canada's industrial effort during the war, the training accomplished was even greater.

Britain Hopes To Buy Soviet Grain

LONDON.—Britain hopes to place "substantial orders" for Russian wheat as a result of negotiations now taking place between Britain and Russia, it was disclosed.

Harold Wilson, Britain's secretary for overseas trade and leader of the recent British trade delegation to Russia, told the House of Commons that starting next year the Soviet Union plans a considerable disposable surplus of foodstuffs, particularly wheat and coarse grains.

"The placing of such orders would, of course, help in reducing our dollar expenditure," an authoritative spokesman said.

It was true, he said, the Russians have had extreme difficulties with their wheat, but their forthcoming harvest is said to be an extremely good one.

OUR COMPLETE SHORT STORY

:: THE GAMBLE ::

By EMMIE PORTER

The afternoon sun dappled the hospital walls and lent a cheerful note to the cot where the tall soldier lay.

"Hey, Nurse!" he called, blue eyes gleaming. "I want plenty of solitude when my sweetie-pie calls this afternoon."

Miss Gordon shook her red head reprovingly. "You soldiers," she murmured, "always out to impress every girl."

"Every girl?" expostulated he of the blue eyes and hospital bed. "Why my dear nurse, I'll have you know that this very special young lady whom you will have the pleasure of seeing shortly is the exclusive recipient of all my mail for to these many months." Warning to his subject the G.I. raised himself to his elbow and peered earnestly into the face of Miss Gordon. "You are young... you are lovely, surely you do not mean to stand there and tell me that you don't believe in love?"

His eyes were gazing at her from his scowling face brought a smile to the full lips of the young nurse. She could not resist the offer of her uniform before answering. "Yes, I believe in love... that is, if it is something deep... something really special and lasting... something sacred... her voice trailed away into silence as she gazed thoughtfully at the hospital window.

"Miss Gordon," his voice was low and husky. "Are you engaged, or?" he blushed a brick red. "or something?" he stammered lamely.

Her grey eyes looked straight into his blue ones. "I am not engaged," she stated. "Neither am I in love." The boy lay back on the cot and closed his eyes. "Thank you nurse. That's what I wanted to know." The puzzled nurse studied his face a moment, glanced at her watch and left the room.

As the visiting hour approached, the blue eyed soldier grew more and more tense. Miss Gordon passing in and out on countless errands caught her head in bewilderment. "Why?" she murmured to herself. "He actually looks as if he is seeing her."

At ten minutes past three the soldier's girl swept in—as regular as a queue, commanding and receiving homage from every masculine eye. Raven black hair fell in cascades to her shoulders. Long scaly lashes hovered provocatively over sea green eyes, and wild roses bloomed tantalizingly on each cheek. A large undulating solitary blinked from the third finger of her left hand.

"Bob, oh Bob!" she exclaimed. "My dearest—my dearest, to have our first meeting here in a hospital... what a pity, what a shame! Oh how differently I had planned things!"

She grinned feebly. "Yeah, so had a lot of other fellows—especially the ones who didn't come."

She pursed her lips. "Can the serious, pal, I—"

Virginia Bob interrupted. "I want to talk to you."

Virginia's eyes grew round with protest. "Now Bob, that isn't just like you. The minute I get here you start lecturing me." Her eyes were cautious as she took compact and lipstick from her purse. Then over the rim of a ridiculous black lace fan she astutely studied him. "O.K. Bob, we never did nice words, did we?"

Bob grimaced and "ahoi!" straight from the shoulder. "Virginia I may sound brutal but I know you can take it. The fact is I'm a doomed man. I have contracted a tropical disease and besides that the wound on my leg has made me a cripple, for now the question is—do you still want to marry me?"

She studied him under lowered lashes. "Bob, I never dreamed—never had any idea—why didn't you let me know something of this before?"

"Well," Bob's face was carefully guarded—almost as carefully guarded as his voice. "I didn't want you to be getting yourself behind any wall of suspicion. I want you to think straight and without any forebodings. The reason I didn't get in touch with you sooner, I wanted to give it to you straight and first hand." His quizzical eyes held hers. "All right baby, what's the verdict?"

"Well," her emerald eyes were clouded, her glance fell to her lap. "It's not quite the same as if we had been seeing each other right along after all three years is a long time... her voice trailed away into nothing and a breathless silence hovered over the hospital cot.

Bob's voice when it came was strong and reassuring. "Sure baby, sure, I understand. I guess you're trying to tell me that it will have to be good-bye."

She nodded but could not find the courage to look up. "Yes Bob, after all I'm young, and I'll have to think of my future." The lovely calculating eyes met his again for a fleeting second.

"Yeah," he agreed wryly. "Yes you're young and what's more you're beautiful—and now we'd better say good-bye."

"Oh Bob," contrition tamed her voice "Wouldn't you like for me to come back to see you again perhaps?"

"No Virginia," he answered lightly. "Let's make it good-bye for keeps. It's simpler that way."

He held out his hand in a gesture of farewell and after a hesitant look, Virginia turned and walked out without a backward look.

Bob sighed and closed his eyes. The firm tap of rubber heels came nearer. Miss Gordon, hands on hips, surveyed him critically. "Of all the imaginative liars!" she burst out. "Of all the—the—"

she searched helplessly for words. "May I ask why you told your beautiful friend all the fairy tales, when you know as well as I, that you are walking out of here tomorrow, a completely well man?"

Bob snatched back the covers, stepped to the floor and put both arms around the starched white shoulders. "Because," he murmured. "I'm going to marry you, my friend, since the day I met saw you. I've wanted to kiss the dimple in your chin, and I'm going to do it right now, this very minute!"

Skyscraper To House U.N. Organization

NEW YORK.—A 40-story rectangular-shaped skyscraper will house the secretariat of the United Nations under the basic architectural design for the new world centre, it was disclosed.

U.N. planning officials said construction of the secretariat building along New York City's East river might begin as early as next December if plans are approved quickly.

The general architectural scheme for building the international capitol was announced by Wallace K. Harrison, U.N. director of planning.

Harrison said the general plan will be to build more detailed studies and incorporated into a report which will be considered by the General Assembly in September.

Demolition of existing structures on the site is expected to begin about July 1.

Harrison said the basic composition of the plan is not necessarily final and is, therefore, subject to revision and modification as the work of the planning staff progresses.

Warn Canadians Travelling Overseas Of Being Left There

OTTAWA.—External Affairs Department officials warned Canadians planning to travel to Britain or Europe that unless they had a guarantee of return transportation they faced the prospect of being stranded until after next Christmas.

A spokesman said Canada House in London and other governmental authorities already were "beseiged" by requests for aid from Canadians who found themselves without return passage and with their funds running low. Other "thousands" might find themselves in a similar situation, with no hope of getting back.

He said many parents of deceased servicemen were going overseas to visit war graves without making adequate preparations for their return.

Town & District

Mr. John Koefoed is spending the summer at the home of his son, Leroy, Mrs. Wm. Service of Red Deer spent a few days in town last week visiting friends.

Miss Grace Deshayes accompanied by Mr. B. Patton of Calgary spent the week end at the home of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. P. Deshayes.

Miss Dorothy Brown, a member of the nursing staff at the Blackfoot Indian hospital spent the weekend at Banff. She thus becomes the forerunner of many Gleichenites who will likely holiday at the mountain resort this summer.

Thursday afternoon about five o'clock hail fell in town and did some damage to garden stuff. A couple of milks men of town there was no hail or rain. Sunday afternoon and evening considerable rain fell over the district thus relieving the worry about moisture for the time being.

Ashby Saure entertained a number of his friends Sunday to a round-up. Bob Brown gave a splendid exhibition of roping. He could catch a calf any way he desired. He is thinking of entering the Calgary show next month.

WILLIAM P. TYNDALL
Wm. P. Tyndall aged 51 years, died suddenly Monday afternoon at the farm home of Marcello Bolinger, Jr., where he had been working. Coroner G. Farquharson and Constable Wall of the R.C.M.P., were called. Mr. Tyndall came here from Black Diamond several weeks ago and had followed his occupation as a plasterer, working for various people. He was born in Minnesota. His wife and family survive him in Black Diamond also a brother in Calgary.

Parking problems are acute in various parts of the country and it appears that definite action must be taken to provide relief, according to officials of the Alberta Motor Association. In various centres in the U.S. strong objections have been made to the installation of parking meters as it is contended that they do not provide a permanent solution to the parking problem. The association believes that the problem can be solved to a great extent by the adoption of off-street parking spaces. It is felt that there are many vacant downtown spaces which could be made available for this purpose. They would serve as a welcome relief especially when the density of traffic is continuing to rise.

Wars are fought by boys, suffered by women, paid for by posterity, and usually started by men old enough to know better.

Gleichenites Asked To Register For Blood Donations

Next week the Canadian Red Cross Society places a new and vital exhibit before the citizens of Alberta. The appeal—not for money—but for voluntary blood donors, people who are willing to give their blood to every hospital patient in Alberta who needs transfusion therapy because of accident, illness or medical reasons may have it free of charge.

Most of us are familiar with Canada's wartime blood donor program to supply blood plasma which saved the lives of countless wounded Canadians. During the war years the people of Alberta established an outstanding record in this field of activity which was the envy of many provinces.

A survey of Canadian hospitals, including those in Alberta, emphasized the post war need for the same kind of service—a service that will benefit all of us. It is up to us to do our part so that we may share with others the knowledge that our willingness to volunteer our blood will mean many lives saved.

War-time research in the new uses of human blood and its derivatives has brought about outstanding medical advances. Human blood plasma have been used with great effectiveness in the treatment of those injured and burned.

The Canadian Red Cross has undertaken to provide this peacetime blood transfusion service. With far-sighted community spirit the Gleichen Red Cross branch has accepted the responsibility of undertaking the registration of our citizens as voluntary donors.

This newspaper goes on record as standing whole-heartedly behind the Red Cross Blood Transfusion Service as a challenging opportunity for the citizens of this community to take an active and essential part in a great humanitarian effort.

Register next week with the Canadian Red Cross as a voluntary blood donor and help save lives.

DDT on the Prairie Farm
Pure DDT is a complex chemical compound called dichloro-diphenyl-trichloroethane. For convenience, the first letter of each word of the chemical name is used—DDT. Undoubtedly DDT will eventually be used for the control of many of our most important agricultural insect pests, but at the present time prairie farmers will be interested chiefly in its use for the control of insects in the house, in the barn, and on livestock.

Important Facts. DDT is not a cure-all. In many cases it will not have standard insecticide now in use. Owing to the poisonous properties of DDT it should be used cautiously. Knowing what DDT is, what form to buy, how best to apply it, and against which insect pests it is most effective is the key to its successful use. The best advice we can give is this: Select a preparation of DDT best suited to your particular needs and the follow the instructions given by its manufacturer.

DDT Circular. In response to the widespread demand from farmers and others for information on DDT Line Extension Farm Service is pleased to announce the publication of a circular entitled, "DDT—Use on the Prairie Farm." This circular deals with the use of DDT for the control of household pest flies and mosquitoes in the barn and some of the more common insect pests of livestock. The information it contains is authoritative and up-to-date having been prepared by Mr. W. S. McLeod, Lecturer in Entomology, University of Manitoba. A list of presentations to be given in using DDT by its various applications is included.

Copies of the DDT circular are available to farmers. They may be obtained through local Line Extension agents, or from Line Extension Farm Service, Winnipeg or Calgary. ATTENTION: Seed Growers. Use our application for inspection of standing crops for registration and certification of the earliest possible date, preferably before June 30th, with the District Supervisor, Plant Products Division, at Winnipeg, Saskatoon, or Regina.

expected to break all prize and attendance records during the 1947 season.

This year commercial stalls will be eliminated from the Monday morning Stampede Parade, to create a spectacle that is entirely western. Officials of the annual show said that communities from outside Calgary have been most co-operative in agreeing to sponsor parade exhibits individualized to the past or present of their community. Residents of rural areas have also assisted in local old time vehicles, Red River carts, Conestoga wagons, stage coaches and prairie schooners—for display in the parade.

Prize money for field events is the greatest ever offered in Canada and is expected to draw cowboys from as far south as the Rio Grande and as far north as the Peace River country. Money offered for bucking stock has been substantially increased, and all horses to buck under saddle will be dunnied out the week before the show under the supervision of Arena Director Dick Cosgrave. Thus only proven buckers will be used by contestants.
